Wirtland announces creation of Global Antiwar Party

Wirtland, internet-based sovereign country, created Global Antiwar Party (G.A.P.) in attempt to unite people even from fighting countries. G.A.P. is a virtual party concerned about real world problems.

July 17th, 2009 - Wirtland officially announced creation of Global Antiwar Party (G.A.P.). At the time of conflict, there are always people from both sides, who oppose the war. Often such people are not adequately represented in their home countries. If the antiwar oppositions from both conflicting sides could unite their voices in a single common party, it would have sufficient political strength to influence the conflict.

Official website describes potential members of the party as follows: "Palestinians and Israelis, who are opposed to war. Georgians and Russians, who do not support policy of conflict. Turks and Greeks, who want to live in peace. Any individual, who does not support the aggressive policy in his own country". As a supranational entity, Wirtland has the unique possibility to unite people even from the fighting countries into a common party.

"GAP demonstrates that Wirtland is not merely a micronation focused on internal "microproblems". The Global Antiwar Party will address the concerns of real world. GAP may become more important than Wirtland, its virtual home," - said Chancellor Alexander, leader of Global Antiwar Party and founder of Wirtland.

The party intends to influence the real intrastate conflicts by applying directly to the governments and international mediators, organizing public support activities, and wide use of mass media.
